

WebDrive® Donation Expands School's Offerings

The Accelerated School has become a national model for education reform and professional development. Striving to fully equip each classroom with state-of-the-art software and technology, the school needed a solution to keep students and parents connected to the school whether on or off campus.

After a simple web search, the School determined WebDrive to be the optimal choice. Students store their unfinished work or homework on their WebDrive and can access it from home. Not only will this keep students connected while off-campus, but parents are given the necessary resource needed to get involved in their child's homework and unfinished projects. Students have been provided a secure and reliable resource, which will help to reduce such issues as lost assignments or incomplete homework projects.

"This generous donation from South River Technologies will enable us to provide a simple, yet secure industry-standard method to keep our staff and students connected to their data whether they're here on-campus or at home," explains Craig Cocca, Technology Coordinator for The Accelerated School. "The Accelerated School is committed to providing inner-city students with high quality educational resources and WebDrive will play a huge role in making that happen."

About The Accelerated School

The Accelerated School is a national public/private partnership model that comprehensively serves the education and wellness needs of its students through a rich and challenging curriculum and integrated community programs, with a goal of preparing each student to succeed as confident citizens, contributing to a global society. The school was founded in 1994 by educators Johnathan Williams and Kevin Sved who shared the common vision of a school where every child would be treated as gifted, held to high expectations and provided a comprehensive educational experience in a safe, nurturing and empowering environment. With parents as a central force in their children's education – and in partnership with teachers, administrators, business, higher education and the community – the school would allow more children to learn and succeed, better equip families to provide support and stability and, ultimately, help transform the community of South Central Los Angeles. The Accelerated School is built on the belief that good schools transform communities and that all children can learn and achieve. The school currently serves 890 students, Pre-K through 10th grade.
